2011-12 FELLOW: RAKESH MALVIYA

Rakesh Malviya is a freelance journalist based in Bhopal. He has been writing on pressing social issues for over a decade, with over 300 stories on social and developmental issues in various publications. Rakesh is also a poet and theatre artist.

“Dureha is neither in a remote corner where health facilities cannot reach, nor is it a village where educational and health infrastructure is not in place.... Still there is a climate of fear in the village. In the last one year alone, more than 50 people have died of TB. Some are very sick and some are on their death bed. According to Hope worker Mithlesh Tiwari, there is not a single house which does not have a TB patient here.”
